Jeter joins the Joneses for Cowboys game

So, just where did Derek Jeter sit when he attended Monday's Cowboys-Redskins game? The retired Yankee had the best of all worlds as Jerry Jones' guest. He did not sit in Jerry's private mini suite where Jones and sons watch all games. When things aren't going right, that room gets small in hurry.

Jeter and former Yankee Tino Martinez sat one floor below next to Jones' daughter, Charlotte Anderson, in the larger Jones suite with the other VIPs.

Dome life

The great biosphere party dome that housed last weekend's Two x Two gala still straddles the front lawn of Cindy and Howard Rachofsky's Preston Hollow estate. Wednesday night, a more intimate gathering will be hosted by party planner Todd Fiscus, the creative genius behind Two x Two.

For the 10th anniversary of his Todd Events company, he's hosted a series of soirees. But the grand finale will be a party inside the dome at the Rachofskys'. Among the expected guests will be a power hitting lineup of local big names who have hosted big events planned by Fiscus: Lynn McBee, Catherine Rose, Emily Summers and the like.

But unlike the parties he did for them, Wednesday's will feature Fiscus' exclusive vision, a chance for him to let himself go creatively. To that end, he will screen a short film he has created for the occasion called Metamorphosis.

Rare art, big money

Days after Saturday's Two x Two for AIDS and Art, people are still marveling that the art auction netted a whopping $7 million, most notably, $2.6 million for an untitled painting by Wade Guyton.

"The pieces themselves were outstanding and unique," said Jamie Niven, chairman of Sotheby's Americas and auctioneer for the evening.

Janney's conundrum

Like journalists and radio programmers across America, former West Wing star Allison Janney was tongue-tied by the title of Cee Lo Green's biggest hit. It's a rather common curse word followed by "you." She was called onstage at Two x Two to introduce Green for a three-song set by the evening's emcee, Plano-raised actor John Benjamin Hickey.

"This is my first trip to Dallas," said the actress to much applause. "Can I say [expletive]?" she asked Hickey before introducing Green.

He nodded his assent and she let fly.

Jeter's dish

When recently discussing diet and nutrition with Men's Health magazine, Derek Jeter did confess a weakness: "I love chicken parmesan. It's my absolute favorite."

Before going out to AT&T Stadium for Monday's Cowboys-Redskins game, Jeter stopped by celebrity hangout Al Biernat's.

His order? Chicken parmesan.
